Heaven and Hell

Blake:

The world of Imagination is the world of eternity; it is the divine bosom into which we shall all go after the death of the Vegetated body. ... There Exist[s] in that Eternal World the Permanent Realities of Every Thing we see reflected in this Vegetable Glass of Nature. All Things are comprehended in their Eternal Forms in the divine body of the Savior, the True Vine of Eternity, The Human Imagination, who appear'd to Me as Coming among his Saints and throwing off the Temporal that the eternal might be Establish'd.

Swedenborg:

“Heaven in its totality reflects a single person, and that it is a person in image and is therefore called the Grand Man. ... the heavenly communities that make up heaven are arranged like the members, organs and viscera in a human being.”

Blake:

“The eternal Body of Man is the Imagination, that is God Himself, The Divine Body, Jesus: we are his members.”

Keynes, Blake the Complete Writings, 776. (Italics mine)

4. Blake's Embodiment of Concepts from Swedenborg's
Divine Love and Wisdom

It is permitted to introduce here, in the way of evidence, a representation of the correspondence of the will and understanding with the heart and lungs which was seen in heaven among the angels.

By a wonderful flowing into spiral movements, such as no words can express, the angels formed the likeness of a heart and the likeness of lungs, with all the interior structures therein; and in this they were falling in with the flow of heaven, for heaven from the inflowing of love and wisdom from the Lord strives to come into such forms.

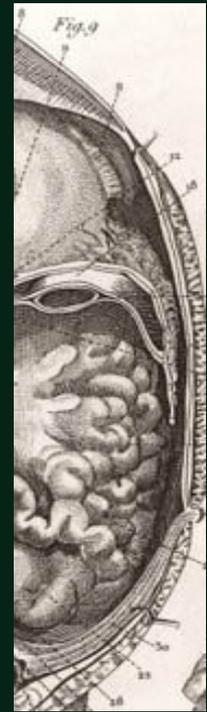

They thus represented the conjunction of the heart and lungs, and at the same time the correspondence of these with the love of the will and with the wisdom of the understanding. This correspondence and union they called the heavenly marriage; saying that in the whole body, and in its several members, organs, and viscera, it is the same as in the things belonging to the heart and lungs DLW 376
